

Call for Expression of Interest Rural Resilience Program

SEDA's economic vitality programs help communities assess their competitive advantages, identify priorities, and move into action. The Rural Resilience Program aligns best practices of jurisdictions across North America following occurrences of economic interruption.

With support from our strategic partners, SEDA is able to bring this action oriented program to a limited number of communities in 2021.

PROGRAM COMPONENTS

Economic Action Planning

- Two sessions will be held in the lead applicant community (virtual options can be provided if preferred and/or regulated):
 - 1) A morning session with local business and non-profit representatives.
 - 2) An afternoon session with elected leaders.
- Participating communities will complete a pre-planning assessment checklist.
- A formal economic action plan will be developed.

Implementation Support

- SEDA will provide virtual implementation support to include coaching, partnership brokering, research, and other such activities as deemed reasonable to achieve identified action plan objectives. Assistance in coordinating funding opportunities, services and analysis provided by other agencies to ensure the community leverages all available resources will be provided.
